PRESIDENT COOLIDGE GREETED BY TWIN CITIES

HONOR GUEST OF THE NORSE-AMERICANS

WILL DELIVER SPEECH AT THE FAIR GROUNDS THIS AFTERNOON

TONIGHT A GREAT PUBLIC RECEPTION WILL BE ACCORDED PRESIDENT AND WIFE

(By United Press)

St. Paul, June 8.—President Coolidge's proverbial luck brought to the Twin Cities tdoay a sharp drop in temperature that promised ideal conditions for the whirlwind day mapped out for him.

The terrific heat that hung over the northwest even on his arrival early last evening was swept away during the night by thunder storms that sent the thermometer tumbling from 90 to 60 degrees.

High, shifting wind in the morning brought a threat of rain to mar the festivities. The president, it was said, will make his speech, rain or shine.

The change was welcome to everyone and not the least to Mr. Coolidge who faced a day packed with all the honors and entertainments that two great cities, proud of having him as their guest, could devise.

The only disappointment it brought was the cancellation of the trip of the naval dirigible Los Angeles to the northwest. More than 5,000 people gathered at the airport when the great craft was due to arrive, refusing to believe reports that it had turned back.

The president and Mrs. Coolidge slept under blankets at the home of Secretary of State Kellogg, but were up early to tackle the heavy program before them.

The president's day opened with a reception to the directors of the Norse American Centennial celebration which he will address at the fair grounds this afternoon. Mrs. Coolidge meantime received a group of girls from the University of Minnesota, members of her college sorority who presented her a banner of the order's colors.

Several conferences with the state republican leaders—all at the Kellogg home—were next on the schedule. At 11 a. m. he was due to leave for Minneapolis by motor to attend a luncheon given in his honor there by the centennial committee. The president was not expected to speak.

The climax of the president's day and of the Norse-American Centennial was to come at 2:30 P. M. at the fair grounds where the president was to make the address for which he came here. A crowd of more than 10,000 persons was expected at the vast open air auditorium. Amplifiers have been installed and the speech will be broadcast by WCCO. Governor Christianson of Minnesota and Secretary of State Kellogg also will speak.

A tour of the exhibitions after the speech and a drive along the Mississipi River back to the Kellogg home were to conclude the afternoon program. Tonight the President and Mrs. Coolidge will attend a great public reception at the state capitol, boarding their special immediately afterward for the return trip to Washington.

The Twin Cities welcomed the Coolidges with open arms. The concourse at the Union station at St. Paul was crowded with humanity, the entire route from the station to the Kellogg home was lined with cheering throngs. The city was decked with flags in which the banner of Norway was prominent.

Among those at the station to receive the presidential party were Prime Minister Mowinckel of Norway, Bishop Lund of Oslo, Norway's guest of the Centennial, Governor Christianson, Mayors Leach and Nelson of Minneapolis and St. Paul, respectively and a committee of 100 prominent citizens.

The trip from Washington was more endurable than anticipated. After a cool night crossing Ohio and Indiana, the president found Wisconsin somewhat warm, but relieving

SECY. KELLOGG PRAISES WORK OF FEDERAL JUDICIARY

DECLARES AMAZING QUANTITY OF SUBVERSIVE PROPAGANDA CIRCULATED

(By United Press)

St. Paul, June 8.—Secretary of State Kellogg speaking to the same audience as the president, sgnificantly warned against tampering with the federal judiciary, an echo of the LaFollette compaign here last year.

He also declared that amazing quantities of subversive propaganda were being circulated in the United States by foreign influence.

"There is no doubt that the principles of our constitution are being assaulted from two sources," said Kellogg. "First, open, as well as secret propagandists who advocate the overthrow of the government; second, a considerable body of our citizens who in the name of liberty and reforms are impatient of constitutional re-construction by insidious approaches and attacks would destry these guarantees of personal liberty.

"I am not an alarmist. I have confidence in the stability of the American people, but the danger to our institutions by this constant propaganda against the government is not imaginary.

"I doubt if you are aware of the amount of destructive revolutionary propaganda which is being secretly distributed in this country by foreign influences.

"If these people are not satisfied with our government and our institutions, let them go where they can find a government which does satisfy them. This is no place for them."

Some people believed that Kellogg injected a discordant note into the celebration, according his remarks were aimed at the radical voters of the northwest who supported LaFollette and his supreme court proposals last year.

HUGE AIRSHIP TURNED BACK AT CLEVELAND

AT 8 A. M. THIS MORNING SHE CIRCLED ABOUT LAKEHURST IN A DENSE FOG

FLYING AT A HEIGHT OF 2,000 FEET AND ONLY 2 ENGINES FUNCTIONING

(By United Press)

Lakehurst, N. J., June 8.—With two of her engines crippled, the navy dirigible Los Angeles limped into port at 2:40 a. m. today after being forced to abandon her trip to Minneapolis where she was to have participated in the Norse-American Centennial. The giant airship had reached Cleveland on her journey when forced to turn back for the first time in her career.

At 8 a. m. the Los Angeles was still circling in this vicinity unable to land because of a dense fog that covered the air field.

First word that the dirigible's flight had been abandoned came from Detroit. When she changed her course at Cleveland she was traveling on only two engines and was flying at a height of 2,000 feet.

Cities over which the Los Angeles passed on her return trip reported she was constantly dipping as if from a result of mechanical difficulties and these reports caused officials at the air station here to fear for her safety. The return voyage, however, was without unusual incident. As soon as the fog clears, the dirigible will be brought to earth and tucked away in her hangar awaiting repairs.

$3,000 ANNUALLY IS ENOUGH TO EDUCATE CHILD, COURT RULES

St. Paul, June 8. — Mrs. Vernon Marguerite Magoffin Peabody Siems Steele lost her court fight to obtain more money for educating her children.

Judge Charles Bechhoefer ruled in Ramsey county court that $3,000 annually per child, as provided in the will of the late Chester P. Siems, Jr., St. Paul millionaire, is sufficient, at least for the present.

Mrs. Peabody-Siems-Steele asked $5,000 each, annually, for Vernon Marguerite, Dorothy, Shelby and Chester P. Siems, Jr.

It costs much more than $3,000 annually to maintain and educate a child, she said.

The case was heard by Judge Bechhoefer April 18.

Reimbursement of Mrs. Steele from the Siems estate to the extent of $3,000 annually per child since Oct. 1, 1922, as provided in the Siems will was ordered.

605 LIVES LOST IN RECENT BIG HEAT WAVE

(By United Press)

A total of 605 lives were lost during the most disastrous heat wave in history which ended abruptly last night after exacting a death toll more than half as large as that which marked the sinking of the Lusitania.

The victims who died from heat and storms or by drowning while seeking relief from the tropical weather represented 16 states. During the last 36 hours that old Sol continued to bake half of the nation, more than half of the total deaths occurred.

GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATORS PROBE CASES OF STRIFE AND RIOTING

(By United Press)

San Francisco, June 8.—The Canton government has been removed to Whampo, due to fighting in the city, acording to a Hongkong cable received here today by a Chinese newspaper.

The battle for Canton still is raging with a large number killed and wounded on both sides, the paper told the United Press. Cadet troops seeking to cross the river were repulsed by forces on the other side.

The Chinese World received cable advice that two government investigators have arrived at Shanghai, which is now quiet, to probe cases of the strife and rioting.

LEGION ACCORDS FULL MILITARY BURIAL TO SOLDIER OF GERMANY

Fairmont, Minn., June 8.—For the first time in the history of Minnesota, perhaps of the country, American World War veterans in Fairmont on Saturday buried with full military honors a German soldier who fought against them in 1918 on the west front in France.

Military ceremonies, a firing squad and taps were accorded to Irvin Hoffman, immigrant boy, who was drafted by the kaiser in 1918, when he was attending school at the age of 14.

Shrapnel wounds and privations resulted in tuberculosis, which caused him to come to this country three months ago, when he went to Ancker hospital in St. Paul. He died there Thursday. He was 21 years old.

Any soldier who gave his life for his country, no matter what country, is entitled to military honors, declared O. M. Berry, Fairmont legion commander, who arranged the military rites.

HUGE AIRSHIP TURNED BACK AT CLEVELAND

AT 8 A. M. THIS MORNING SHE CIRCLED ABOUT LAKEHURST IN A DENSE FOG

FLYING AT A HEIGHT OF 2,000 FEET AND ONLY 2 ENGINES FUNCTIONING

(By United Press)

Lakehurst, N. J., June 8.—With two of her engines crippled, the navy dirigible Los Angeles limped into port at 2:40 a. m. today after being forced to abandon her trip to Minneapolis where she was to have participated in the Norse-American Centennial. The giant airship had reached Cleveland on her journey when forced to turn back for the first time in her career.

At 8 a. m. the Los Angeles was still circling in this vicinity unable to land because of a dense fog that covered the air field.

First word that the dirigible's flight had been abandoned came from Detroit. When she changed her course at Cleveland she was traveling on only two engines and was flying at a height of 2,000 feet.

Cities over which the Los Angeles passed on her return trip reported she was constantly dipping as if from a result of mechanical difficulties and these reports caused officials at the air station here to fear for her safety. The return voyage, however, was without unusual incident. As soon as the fog clears, the dirigible will be brought to earth and tucked away in her hangar awaiting repairs.

LOS ANGELES BACK IN NEW JERSEY TODAY

Lakehurst, N. J., June 8. — The naval dirigible Los Angeles which was forced to turn back at Cleveland, Ohio, yesterday, after attempting to fly to Minneapolis, was moored here this afternoon.

The Los Angeles had arrived over the air station long before daylight, but was unable to moor because of fog. Her officers reported during the morning they made 22 unsuccessful attempts to land before doing so.

$3,000 ANNUALLY IS ENOUGH TO EDUCATE CHILD, COURT RULES

St. Paul, June 8. — Mrs. Vernon Marguerite Magoffin Peabody Siems Steele lost her court fight to obtain more money for educating her children.

Judge Charles Bechhoefer ruled in Ramsey county court that $3,000 annually per child, as provided in the will of the late Chester P. Siems, Jr., St. Paul millionaire, is sufficient, at least for the present.

Mrs. Peabody-Siems-Steele asked $5,000 each, annually, for Vernon Marguerite, Dorothy, Shelby and Chester P. Siems, Jr.

It costs much more than $3,000 annually to maintain and educate a child, she said.

The case was heard by Judge Bechhoefer April 18.

Reimbursement of Mrs. Steele from the Siems estate to the extent of $3,000 annually per child since Oct. 1, 1922, as provided in the Siems will was ordered.

MIRIAM BURNS WEDS, WON'T GIVE UP GOLF

Chicago, June 8.—Miss Miriam Burns of Kansas City, woman's western golf chmapion in 1923, and Joseph Francis Horn of Wilmette, Ill., were married Saturday. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Horn left for a wedding trip. The former Miss Burns let it be known emphatically that her marriage would not cause her to give up golf. "Golf is fine," she said, "but a husband is better. And a husband and golf are better yet."

When to Suspect Tuberculosis

(By Dr. James K. Anderson, Superintendent Deerwood Sanatarium)

There are numerous complaints that suggest tuberculosis to the physician and in many cases these complaints alone will lead to a positive diagnosis of the disease. The most prominent of these complaints or symptoms will be discussed briefly in articles to appear in the future. Any of these symptoms should be sufficient cause for a thorough investigation as to their cause.

We will first discuss—lassitude, which is defined in the dictionary as weariness or languor. It consists of a tired worn out feeling coming on most any time during the day, but more commonly in the afternoon. The person may consider himself just lazy or suffering from an attack of the so-called Spring Fever things that were formerly a pleasure for him to do now become burdensome and an effort. He has to spur himself up to complete his days work, this may happen to people doing both mental of physical work. They even lose ambition for enjoyment and are perfectly satisfied to just "sit around." Although they sleep well they arise with an unrested feeling and have to force themselves to begin their days labor, after working a short while may feel less tired.

This tired feeling gradually becomes more marked as the disease progresses and becomes weakness or actual loss of strength. This may be found in people well muscled who will say "that they feel strong but do not seem to have any strength" and that they cannot do the same things as they formerly did. Brain workers find that they are not able to concentrate. All these symptoms of lassitude are likely due to the positions of the disease that are circulating in the blood stream.

If you have an unusually tired out feeling that it not relieved by rest and cannot account for it take it up with your physician, you may have early pulmonary turebculosis.

GIRL, FREED BY JURY, ADMITTED SHE KILLED FATHER'S "AFFINITY"

Lucille Wunsch, 15-year-old Chicago girl, was freed by a Coroner's Jury, although she admitted that she had shot and killed Miss Agnes Sinneck, the "other woman," who had supplanted her mother in her father's affections. The girl accidentally wounded her father and mother. Lucille declared that her father's attention to Miss Sinneck threatened to break up their home. She told the jury that she did not intend to kill Miss Sinneck but merely wanted to frighten her.

When to Suspect Tuberculosis

(By Dr. James K. Anderson, Superintendent Deerwood Sanatarium)

There are numerous complaints that suggest tuberculosis to the physician and in many cases these complaints alone will lead to a positive diagnosis of the disease. The most prominent of these complaints or symptoms will be discussed briefly in articles to appear in the future. Any of these symptoms should be sufficient cause for a thorough investigation as to their cause.

We will first discuss—lassitude, which is defined in the dictionary as weariness or languor. It consists of a tired worn out feeling coming on most any time during the day, but more commonly in the afternoon. The person may consider himself just lazy or suffering from an attack of the so-called Spring Fever things that were formerely a pleasure for him to do now become burdensome and an effort. He has to spur himself up to complete his days work, this may happen to people doing both mental of physical work. They even lose ambition for enjoyment and are perfectly satisfied to just "sit around." Although they sleep well they arise with an unrested feeling and have to force themselves to begin their days labor, after working a short while may feel less tired.

This tired feeling gradually becomes more marked as the disease progresses and becomes weakness or actual loss of strength. This may be found in people well muscled who will say "that they feel strong but do not seem to have any strength" and that they cannot do the same things as they formerly did. Brain workers find that they are not able to concentrate. All these symptoms of lassitude are likely due to the positions of the disease that are circulating in the blood stream.

If you have an unusually tired out feeling that it not relieved by rest and cannot account for it take it up with your physician, you may have early pulmonary turebculosis.

GIRL, FREED BY JURY, ADMITTED SHE KILLED FATHER'S "AFFINITY"

Lucille Wunsch, 15-year-old Chicago girl, was freed by a Coroner's Jury, although she admitted that she had shot and killed Miss Agnes Sinneck, the "other woman," who had supplanted her mother in her father's affections. The girl accidentally wounded her father and mother. Lucille declared that her father's attention to Miss Sinneck threatened to break up their home. She told the jury that she did not intend to kill Miss Sinneck but merely wanted to frighten her.

GIRL SCOUTS SUMMER CAMP

Brainerd Girls, in 3 Years Existence of Girl Scouts, Have Never Asked Contributions

BENEFIT SHOW JUNE 9-10

From Percentage Realized Expect to Finance Their Camp This Year

Will the public assist the Brainerd Girl Scouts in their efforts to raise sufficient funds for carrying on their 1925 summer camp? This is the question uppermost in the minds of the girls, who are asking the aid of the public in a plan which will work no hardship on anyone.

The girls, in the three years that their organization has been in existence, have never asked donations or solicited contributions of any sort to finance their projects. And they are not going to begin that practice this year.

Instead, they have arranged with Manager George Irwin, of the New Park theatre, to put on a benefit show Tuesday and Wednesday, June 9th and 10th, from which the Girl Scouts will receive a percentage on the sale of tickets. From this source they hope to realize enough to finance their summer camp. It is the only manner that the Scouts have of making money, and is the method used for the past two years for providing camp funds.

The picture selected for this benefit show at the New Park on Tuesday and Wednesday is "The Goose Hangs High" the picturization of the famous stage play, and a James Cruze production, of "Covered Wagon" fame.

This is a comedy-drama of more than wonderful entertainment, and one that every member of ever family should see. It is heralded as the great American family picture, making a strong appeal to dad and mother as well as to the young people. Bachelor men and bachelor maids will enjoy it, too.

"The Goose Hangs High" is a tender, infinitely human story of a typical family of today. It depicts their joys, sorrows, thrills. There are highlights aplenty to keep the audience intensely interested throughout the length of the picture.

And the cast is exceptionally strong, consisting of stars who are favorties with all theatre-goers. They include Constance Bennett, Myrtle Stedman, Esther Ralston, George Irving and Edward Peil, Jr.

This production inaugurates a new era in motion picture history, the partial elimination of sub-titles. Critics have awaited the day when it would be possible to make pictures without the sub-titles. It would be a welcome day to thousands of unfortunate victims of those movie pests who insist on reading the titles aloud.

Barring a brief forword, the film contains only two sub-titles, that is, titles necessary to explain the action of the story. There are, of course, many spoken titles in the course of the film. The action is so graphic that it needs little explanation in sub-titles.

The public in attending the showing of "The Goose Hangs High" will get full value for their money in one of the outstanding productions of the year, and in addition will be assisting the local Girl Scouts in providing funds for their 1925 summer camp, a very worthy cause.

ELKS FLAG DAY SERVICES SOON

To be Held on Sunday, June 14, in Gregory Park, Many Organizations Joining

ELKS NAME COMMITTEES

Participating it is Expected to Have D. A. R., G. A. R., Ladies of G. A. R., W. R. C. Etc.

Elks flag day ceremonies will be held at Gregory park on Sunday afternoon, June 14. A committee was named to attend to details and to see if many other organizations will participate in the Elks services.

These patriotic societies include the Grand Army of the Republic, Ladies of the G. A. R., Women's Relief Corps, Daughters of the American Revolution, Boy Scouts, American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, Spanish-American War Veterans, Disabled War Veterans, and others.

It is hoped to provide an excellent program in which vocal and band music will have a part. Hon. E. P. Scallon of Crosby will deliver the address on the flag.

"FOLLOWERS OF THE GLEAM"

The "Followers of the Gleam" met Friday afternoon with Mrs. E. P. Slipp and a short program was carried out which consisted of the following:

"Waiting for the doctor" a drama, the characters being:

Two American girls—Evelyn Wise and Mrs. Slipp.

Chinese girl—Kathryn Allbright.

Japanese girl—Geneva Johnson.

Mohammedan girl—Viola McKay.

Girl from India—Elizabeth Folsom.

The gist of the reading showed the long waiting, in the lands of the Orient, for medical assistance, as shown by the girls from these places, and resulted in the girls of America having their eyes opened to the great need and their further deciding to go "Straight to our missionary society and tell them just how things really are, and we will do our best to send doctors and nurses and build hosiptals with the desire to be a doctor myself and go somewhere to help some of the people who have waited so long for a doctor."

Elizabeth Folsom read a short story, "But love covereth all," by Miss Martha Wiley, W. B. M. I. missionary of Foochow, China.

Mrs. Slipp commended the Followers of the Gleam for their willingness, faithfulness and interest manifested in the carrying on of this missionary effort, also expressing appreciation for the co-operation of parents and guardians in helping to make this work a success during the three years she has been leader of the society, and during which time Elizabeth Folsom was absent only once from the meetings.

Attention was called to the importance of always being "Folowers of the Gleam," as having caught a gleam of the spiritual, physical and mental needs of their sisters of the universe and in working to help overcome these urgent wants, so should they continue to pass the torch, no matter where, nor in what capacity situated, to those of the less fortunate ones.

Kathryn Allbright, very fittingly and effectively played and sang, "Follow the Gleam," and the program closed with all singing, "Send the Light.'

Following was the tacking of a quilt, which was pieced by the members of the society during the winter's monthly meetings. According to American superstition, the one who found the button which had been placed in the quilt, or came nearest it, was supposed to be the lucky one. The honor went to Geneva Johnson.

This quilt, with other articles, will be sent to the Kate Ford Whitman hospital, Fenchow, China, which hospital is under the direction of Dr. Clara Nutting, W. B. M. I., missionary, and of which it is said, "With your help the Fenchow hospital must fight disease among 6,000,000 people, in a territory 12 times the area of Massachusetts.'

The money in the treasury as kept by treasurer Viola McKay, will be sent to Samokov, Bulgaria, where another W. B. M. I. missionary, Miss Inez Abbott, is principal of a girls' school. The girls write of her, "And Miss Abbott! well, we all love her dearly and we believe she is the 'best friend' of all of us. Marvellous woman."

The books, as kept by secretary, Kathryn Carmichael, two years and Evelyn Weisz one year, show thoughtful and careful handling.

The Friday afternoon meeting closed with the serving of refreshments by the hostess.

"Oh How I Envy You!"

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

Lying there in all your splendor
Like a prince of other days,
Greeting with a smile so tender
Everyone's adoring gaze—
How contented with your station
Is your happy little heart!
Fretfulness and lamentation
In your program have small part.

Just to lie and kick and wriggle
And to stretch and squirm and roll,
While you grunt and coo and giggle—
Bless your joyous baby soul,
All you ask is rest and quiet
And a mother's loving care;
Yours is such a simple diet:
Water, milk and good fresh air.

How I envy you the pleasures
Of your artless baby ways,
And the many priceless treasures
That enrich your baby days!
I wish I could have them haul me
In a baby cab again—
And could hear sweet voices call me
Things they seldom say to men!

GRAND VIEW LODGE ON GULL

Resort Conducted by M. V. Baker Has Large Lodge With 20 Rooms and 15 Cottages

SEASON TO OPEN ON JUNE 18

Elks Lodge of Brainerd to Give a Dance at Grand View Lodge on Wednesday, June 24

Grand View lodge and cottages, located on Gull lake, and conducted by M. V. Baker, will open its season on June 18. Grand View Lodge is a hostelry of beautiful Alpine architecture, fashioned of beautiful stone from the shores of Gull lake, and from native trees from the forests of Gull lake. In the forest lobby white pine trees do duty as pillars on top of which rest other mammoth supporting girders of pine for the upper floors. At one end of the lounge are the offices and stands of rustic design, and at the other end a fireplace of large proportions built of native cobble stone. The walls are decked with mounted specimens of moose, deer, and other animals found in the north woods.

The rugs, draperies, etc., are of Indian and Japanese design to conform with the rustic surroundings. Off the lounge, through wide folding French doors are the spacious porches 120 feet in length, furnished with comfortable chairs and swings. Adjoining the lobby is the dining room with a seating capacity for 200 people, and lighted by an almost solid unit of French windows on either side. The entire upper floor, 60 feet in width by 110 feet in length, is devoted to dancing, refreshments and athletics. A roof garden in the tree tops overlooks the entire Gull lake, and with a floor of extreme fineness and finish is found here fitted with appropriate decorations and with dressing, checking and smoking rooms, making it a feature of Grand View lodge so much desired by the younger folks.

On Wednesday evening, June 24, Brainerd Lodge of Elks will give a dance at Grand View lodge.

Grand View Lodge is conducted on the popular American cottage plan. The large central buildings contain the dining halls, lobbies, lounging rooms, business headquarters and social assembly halls. Surrounding this central unit and along the lake shore are 20 sleeping cottages which range from one to four rooms each. The club house contains 20 sleeping rooms. The grounds have a fine tennis court, four regulation horseshoe courts. There is a mile of bathing beach, motor boat, rowboats equipped with Evinruds, etc. Mr. Baker buys his supplies largely in Brainerd.

Wealth Through Misfortune

At the end of life a man finds himself rich, not so much by his fortunes as by his misfortunes. The Persians had a vase of glass which when empty was colorless, but when filled with wine flashed forth many rare pictures. So a bosom empty of a heart of pain makes a lusterless life, but a bosom in which a heart bleeds reveals hidden virtues.—Tilton.

Bashfulness Forgotten

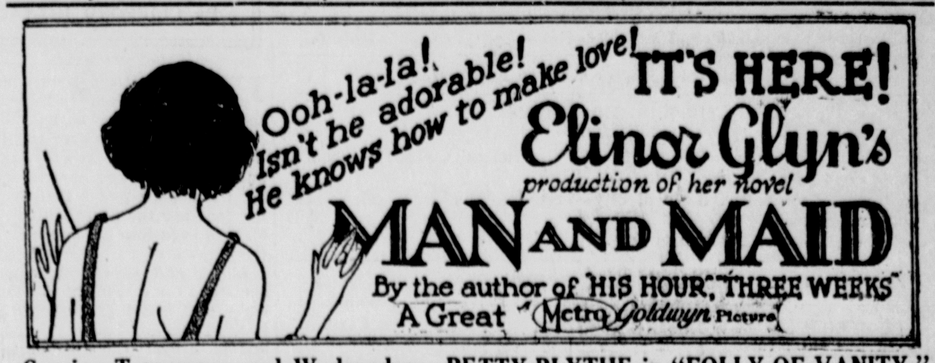

"This collecting of cigar bands may be a nuisance," said Mrs. Smith at the mothers' council meeting, "but something is to be said for it. For instance, it has cured our Tommy of his nervousness and timidity. He will speak to anybody now."

Profit and Service

In a recent article on economics in "The Nation's Business," Foster and Catchings, say: "Profit-making was maintained and developed by American statesmen and legislators, with the approval of economists, because these men believed that profit-making by manufacturers, traders and financiers was the most effective way of increasing national wealth."

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes only in profits which accrue from service. This Company is in business to serve its patrons, and through this service to earn an adequate profit for the stockholders whose money has made the industry possible. Profit is the life-blood of industry, but the profit taken must be an exact return for the service rendered. Profiteering is abhorrent to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) in serving gasoline and oils is rendering a fundamental service, not only to immediate patrons, but to everyone in the Middle West. The progress of the community depends upon these products. Without them, farmers could not produce sufficient food-stuffs, nor could industry produce sufficient clothing, shelter, light, heat and other necessities of life.

The providing of gasoline and oils can be accomplished only by specialists. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana), in particular, has developed through years of effort an organization of specialists, men who know their jobs from the ground up, and who think of these jobs primarily as a service.

These men are experts. No matter what demand may be made upon them, in the line of their work, they are equal to the emergency. Such a body of employes, organized under expert direction, such as obtains in this Company, is a valuable asset to the community.

While man is constituted as he is today, the incentive to action will always be a reward of some sort. And profit, when it is the result of honest, useful service, undertaken for a fair and agreed return, is the most powerful incentive.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to the last man, is in business first and foremost to render service. It is to the interest of this Company to sell gasoline and oils as cheaply as possible, that they may be within reach of all. For only by sales on a mighty scale can this Company continue to succeed.

Like a prince of other days,
Greeting with a smile so tender
Everyone's adoring gaze—
How contented with your station
Is your happy little heart!
Fretfulness and lamentation
In your program have small part.

Just to lie and kick and wriggle
And to stretch and squirm and roll,
While you grunt and coo and giggle—
Bless your joyous baby soul,
All you ask is rest and quiet
And a mother's loving care;
Yours is such a simple diet:
Water, milk and good fresh air.

How I envy you the pleasures
Of your artless baby ways,
And the many priceless treasures
That enrich your baby days!
I wish I could have them haul me
In a baby cab again—
And could hear sweet voices call me
Things they seldom say to men!

GRAND VIEW LODGE ON GULL

Resort Conducted by M. V. Baker Has Large Lodge With 20 Rooms and 15 Cottages

SEASON TO OPEN ON JUNE 18

Grand View lodge and cottages, located on Gull lake, and conducted by M. V. Baker, will open its season on June 18. Grand View Lodge is a hostelry of beautiful Alpine architecture, fashioned of beautiful stone from the shores of Gull lake, and from native trees from the forests of Gull lake. In the forest lobby white pine trees do duty as pillars on top of which rest other mammoth supporting girders of pine for the upper floors. At one end of the lounge are the offices and stands of rustic design, and at the other end a fireplace of large proportions built of native cobble stone. The walls are decked with mounted specimens of moose, deer, and other animals found in the north woods.

The rugs, draperies, etc., are of Indian and Japanese design to conform with the rustic surroundings. Off the lounge, through wide folding French doors are the spacious porches 120 feet in length, furnished with comfortable chairs and swings. Adjoining the lobby is the dining room with a seating capacity for 200 people, and lighted by an almost solid unit of French windows on either side. The entire upper floor, 60 feet in width by 110 feet in length, is devoted to dancing, refreshments and athletics. A roof garden in the tree tops overlooks the entire Gull lake, and with a floor of extreme fineness and finish is found here fitted with appropriate decorations and with dressing, checking and smoking rooms, making it a feature of Grand View lodge so much desired by the younger folks.

On Wednesday evening, June 24, Brainerd Lodge of Elks will give a dance at Grand View lodge.

Grand View Lodge is conducted on the popular American cottage plan. The large central buildings contain the dining halls, lobbies, lounging rooms, business headquarters and social assembly halls. Surrounding this central unit and along the lake shore are 20 sleeping cottages which range from one to four rooms each. The club house contains 20 sleeping rooms. The grounds have a fine tennis court, four regulation horseshoe courts. There is a mile of bathing beach, motor boat, rowboats equipped with Evinruds, etc. Mr. Baker buys his supplies largely in Brainerd.

Wealth Through Misfortune

At the end of life a man finds himself rich, not so much by his fortunes as by his misfortunes. The Persians had a vase of glass which when empty was colorless, but when filled with wine flashed forth many rare pictures. So a bosom empty of a heart of pain makes a lusterless life, but a bosom in which a heart bleeds reveals hidden virtues.—Tilton.

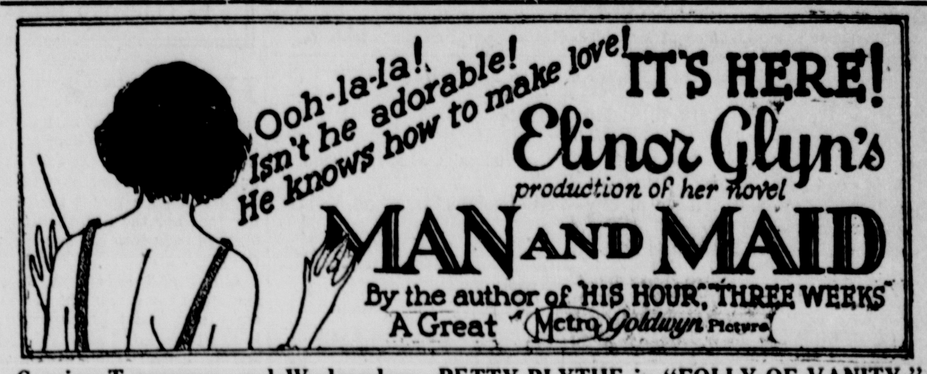

Bashfulness Forgotten

"This collecting of cigar bands may be a nuisance," said Mrs. Smith at the mothers' council meeting, "but something is to be said for it. For instance, it has cured our Tommy of his nervousness and timidity. He will speak to anybody now."

Profit and Service

In a recent article on economics in "The Nation's Business," Foster and Catchings, say: "Profit-making was maintained and developed by American statesmen and legislators, with the approval of economists, because these men believed that profit-making by manufacturers, traders and financiers was the most effective way of increasing national wealth."

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes only in profits which accrue from service. This Company is in business to serve its patrons, and through this service to earn an adequate profit for the stockholders whose money has made the industry possible. Profit is the life-blood of industry, but the profit taken must be an exact return for the service rendered. Profiteering is abhorrent to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) in serving gasoline and oils is rendering a fundamental service, not only to immediate patrons, but to everyone in the Middle West. The progress of the community depends upon these products. Without them, farmers could not produce sufficient food-stuffs, nor could industry produce sufficient clothing, shelter, light, heat and other necessities of life.

The providing of gasoline and oils can be accomplished only by specialists. The Standard Oil Company (Indiana), in particular, has developed through years of effort an organization of specialists, men who know their jobs from the ground up, and who think of these jobs primarily as a service.

These men are experts. No matter what demand may be made upon them, in the line of their work, they are equal to the emergency. Such a body of employes, organized under expert direction, such as obtains in this Company, is a valuable asset to the community.

While man is constituted as he is today, the incentive to action will always be a reward of some sort. And profit, when it is the result of honest, useful service, undertaken for a fair and agreed return, is the most powerful incentive.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to the last man, is in business first and foremost to render service. It is to the interest of this Company to sell gasoline and oils as cheaply as possible, that they may be within reach of all. For only by sales on a mighty scale can this Company continue to succeed.

CO-OPERATIVE NEW RULING TO WORK NO HARM IT IS SAID

AUTHORITIES have studied the possible effect of the nullification of section 27 of the Minnesota co-operative marketing law and have minimized it, saying it will not seriously affect the farmers' co-operative marketing associations.

Here is how S. E. Elliott, secretary of the Minnesota Potato Growers' association, has explained the situation:

"This action was anticipated, according to the opinion of our counsel, and follows the understanding had by the co-operative association for some time. Under section 26 of the same law, it was explained, it is provided that non-members may be penalized for misdemeanor and in civil actions if they deliberately and maliciously induce farmer-members to violate their contracts with the associations. If a member voluntarily violates his contract he may be held liable.

"Nullification of section 27 merely eliminates prosecution of outsiders who might innocently buy from an association member produce which already has been contracted for by the association. It in no way voids existing contracts nor prevents farmer-members from making further contracts."

Doubt regarding the status of innocent purchasers of farm produce under contracts to a co-operative was removed by the supreme court decision when section 27 of the new co-operative marketing law was held invalid.

Explaining the effect of the decision, W. E. Rumble of Mitchell, Doherty, Dumble, Bunn and Butler, general counsel for the Minnesota Co-operative Creameries Association, The Minnesota Potato Growers' Exchange, The Minnesota Co-operative Egg & Poultry Exchange and the Central Livestock Commission association, says:

"Under the ruling, the situation in the state today is that a dealer may purchase the products of a member of a co-operative but can not induce or attempt to induce a member to sell. In other words, if a member of a co-operative voluntarily and without solicitation brings products to a dealer, the association can not sue or prosecute the dealer but it can enjoin the member and recover damages from him for his breach of his marketing contract.

"However, if a dealer solicits a member to deliver products to him or takes any steps for the purpose of inducing a member to sell or deliver to him his products knowing that the member is under contract to the association, then the dealer can be sued and heavy damages recovered. He also can be prosecuted in the criminal courts.

"It is our opinion that the decision will not harm the organizations. No attempt has ever been made to prosecute a dealer for merely purchasing from a member. Every farmer should be honestly told of just what the decision means and members should understand that the court's opinion is neither a body or death blow to co-operatives."

OUR PEACEFUL UNITED STATES

AT the naval academy at Annapolis, President Coolidge delivered an address emphasizing the peaceful intents of the United States and our traditional stand in international matters.

The naval academy can only fulfill its highest functions if it exists as an "instrument of righteousness, protecting the proper security of this country, while serving to maintain world peace," President Coolidge declared in delivering the address to the graduating class of the academy.

"I do not believe the naval academy can exist if it represents mere naked force," the president said. "I want to see it represent much more than that. We must make it an instrument of righteousness. If we are to promote peace on earth, we must have a good deal more than the power of the sword. We must call into action the spiritual and moral forces of mandkind."

In the following words, the President emphasized the usual peacefulness of the United States.

"It is known of all the world that we have no present or traditional enemies, that we covet no territory, harbor no imperialistic designs and are not arming ourselves with the expectation of attacking or being attacked," he said. "So far as we can look into the future, so far as we can gauge the power and temper of other peoples, there never was a time when it was less likely that any other nation or combination of nations would or could make any attack on us."

The President vigorously denounced persons both in and out of the military or naval services, who seek to advance the cause of preparedness by predicting the immediate danger of war or predicting the hostile intentions of other countries.

"The suggestion that any other people are harboring a hostile intent toward us is a very serious charge to make," he said. "We would not relish having our honorable motives and peaceful intentions questioned, others cannot relish having any of us question theirs. It seems to me perfectly proper for anyone upon any suitable occasion to advocate the maintenance of a navy in keeping with the greatness and dignity of our country."

Though stressing the peaceful aims of his administration and of this country, the President firmly declared for adequate national defense. The peaceful conduct of every day affairs, the preservation of freedom and all material and spiritual progress can only be attained by sufficient military and naval defense.

Starboard and Larboard

Starboard is probably derived from steer board and became identified with the side of the ship to the right of a person at the steer board and facing the bow. The word larboard was used to designate the side to the left. This term has been superseded by the word port in order to avoid the confusion caused by the similarity of names.

Her Answer to His Letter

By CLIFFORD HOWARD

(Copyright.)

HAD the postman been a more observant person he would have seen that the letter he handed to the young woman at the door was both unexpected and disturbing. As it was, however, he passed on without noticing the sudden pallor that overspread her face nor the haste with which she stepped back into the house and closed the door.

Alone, and safe from observation, she stood for a moment in the narrow entry and gazed fixedly at the letter in her trembling hands. "I knew it; it is from Allen!" she whispered.

It was written in pale ink and the chirography was cramped and uneven, making it difficult to decipher. Her hands shook as she smoothed out the folds in the paper and held it up so that the light from the window might fall upon it. Then, in half murmur, half whisper, she read the letter aloud to herself, slowly and haltingly:

HOTEL GRAFTON
Portland, Ore., Sept. 11, 1904.

My Dear Mary:

You will be surprised to hear from me after all this time. I have not written to you since I left Buffalo. That was two years ago last March. I suppose you thought you would never hear from me again, and I thought so, too. I was desperate and hopeless and I thought it was all up with me. I drifted about out here until the spring of 1903, and then I made a strike for gold in Alaska. It was a last chance and a hard one, but I struck it and luck came my way and I cleared up more than a hundred thousand, and all I want now to complete my fortune and make life worth living is for you to forgive me, Mary, and take me back. I know I did wrong not to write to you or send you any word; but I was desperate and I wanted you to forget there was such a man as me. I thought my life was a failure and I did not dare to ask you to marry me and share my bad luck with me. But it is all over now and I love you the same as I always did, and I want you to say it is all right and you will come out to me here and make a home for me. You need never think about work any more. I will build you a house fit for a queen and you can have your horses and servants and all the money you want to buy books and fine dresses. Don't say "no." I have made a man of myself for your sake, Mary, and I love you and I want you. Answer at once and tell me it is all right and say you will come.

It is going on three years since I have heard anything of you. Are you well and are you still hard at work with your typewriting? And how is the twin—Susan? Does she look as much like you as ever? I will never forget how you let me take her to the entertainment that night thinking all the time it was yourself. That was a great joke on me.

I wish I could come myself to fetch you, but I am in a business deal out here that won't let me get away for several weeks, and I can't wait that long for you. Don't think about the expense of the trip. I will look after that. Only say you will come and be my wife. I love you. I love you.

ALLEN.

She laid the letter down, and, turning toward the window, gazed out vacantly into space. A mist had begun to fall in the shadowing twilight, giving to the world without an aspect of utter dreariness. For several minutes the ticking of the clock on the corner shelf was the only sound that broke upon the somber stillness. The woman at the window sat motionless, save for the troubled heaving of her bosom. Her thin, worn hands lay on her lap, tightly clasped, while her upraised face, pale and tense, gave sign in mute distress of the torturing conflict that was burning within her heart.

A tear trickling down her cheek aroused her from her reverie. Mechanically she dried her eyes and then, turning slowly from the window, allowed her gaze to wander about the room in deliberate contemplation of its tokens of poverty and hardship. Everything about her, from her faded dress to the few, cheap pictures on the wall, spoke of toil and struggle and want. It was nothing new. She had been accustomed to it for years; but there was that in her expression now that revealed a sudden aroused and bitter realization of her cheerless surroundings; a passionate revulsion of feeling; a revolt against the conditions that so long had bound her to a life of drudgery and care.

"But, no, no— it is not alone because of this! It is not because of this!" she cried in sudden outburst of self-confession. "It is because I love him, and always have loved him!"

There was a note of defiance in her voice, as of one who has reached a determination in the face of some opposing will, a victory of the heart over the forces of mind and of judgment.

Opening a drawer in the table she took from it a small bottle of ink and a sheet of note paper, and with the eagerness born of impellent resolution she made answer to the letter. She wrote rapidly and without hesitation, speaking aloud each word as she wrote it:

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 18, 1904.

Dear Allen:

Yes, I will come. All is forgiven. I am alone now. Sister is no longer with me. I have suffered much since I saw you last. You must expect to find me altered in many ways. Answer soon and tell me how and when to come. I send you my heart's best love. It has been yours during all these dreary months of silence, and shall be yours till I die.

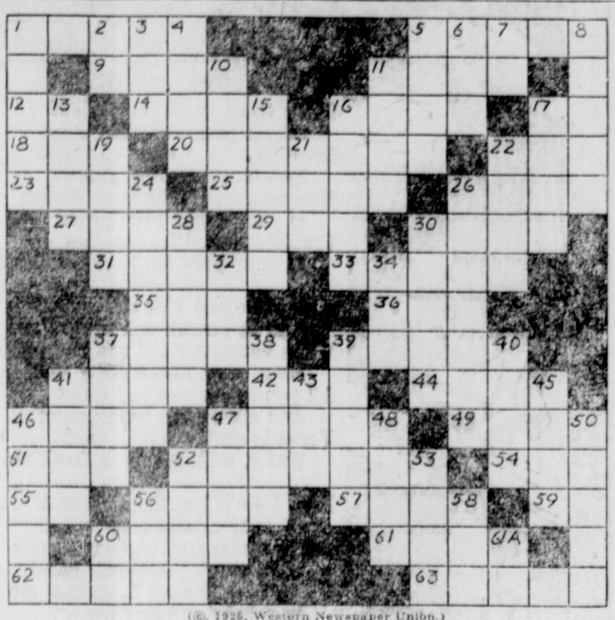

Always your loving
MARY.

She had scarcely signed it, when, with a little cry of fright, she hastily drew her pen through the signature; and snatching up the letter, tore it to bits. With the same impulsive haste she picked up the letter from Allen, put it back into its envelope and deftly resealed it. Then, across the face of it, in an unsteady hand, she wrote: "Return to writer. Mary Sedgwick died April 25, 1903."

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Kilt Not National Dress of Scotland

By many people, the kilt is regarded as the national dress of Scotland, but this is not correct, for it is worn only in the Highlands and has never been popular in the Lowlands. The kilt was suppressed by act of parliament in 1745, after the Jacobite rebellion, and though it was tolerated at a later date, it never became popular again.

The earliest mention of the kilt is to be found in an obscure passage of the Norwegian history of Magnus Barefoot, a king of that country who came to the Hebrides in the Eleventh century. It appears that the dress of those days consisted of a sort of skirt, dyed or painted, and a mantle, the former being the original of the kilt and the latter of the plaid.

In "Letters from the North of Scotland," published in 1725, the author describes the Highlanders as wearing "a bonnet made of thrum, without a brim; a short coat, a waistcoat longer by five or six inches; short stockings, and brogues without heels. Over this habit they wear a plaid, which is usually three yards long and two breadths wide, and the whole garb is made of chequered tartan."

Old Sea Superstition

The Flying Dutchman was a phantom ship seen by sailors in tempestuous weather off the Cape of Good Hope, and considered the forerunner of ill luck. The generally accepted tradition, as stated by Sir Walter Scott, is "that she was originally a vessel loaded with great wealth, on board of which some horrid act of murder and piracy had been committed; that the plague broke out among the wicked crew, who had perpetrated the crime, and that they sailed in vain from port to port, offering, as the price of shelter, the whole of their ill-gotten wealth; that they were excluded from every harbor for fear of the contagion which was devouring them; and that, as a punishment of their crimes, the apparition of the ship still continues to haunt those seas in which the catastrophe took place."—Kansas City Times.

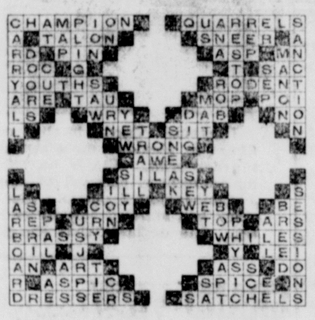

Times Have Changed

In the good old days, when a wagon broke down in the road we used to gather around it and put in several hours apiece inquiring how the contretemps occurred, sympathizing with the owner of the vehicle, and recalling and describing in the most minute detail sundry incidents of similar character which had transpired in the past. But nowadays when a motorcar blows out a tire we go right on.—Eh-yah!—Kansas City Star.

Turkeys Perform Wild Dance Around Snake

I know not if the wild turkey suffers from snake bite; but at sight of a large snake the bird will show extreme excitement. If a flock be present a slow dance will be begun about the reptile, the birds lowering their wings, raising and spreading their tails and making a continuous querulous calling. Single birds will detach themselves from the revolving circle to make frantic dashes at the snake, says a story in "Days Off in Dixie."

"This dervishlike performance will continue for an hour or more. If the snake is not too formidable he will likely be killed; but a serpent of the proportions of a great diamond-back rattler will be left unmolested.

"I once witnessed this strange snake dance in the mountains of southern Pennsylvania. From the top of a hanging ravine I looked down through the mist of dawn and counted the turkeys. There were 26 in number. They continued their antics about the snake for a full half hour, when they broke up the dance and began foraging. The snake was a king snake and a large one. The turkeys probably left him dazed and deafened, but otherwise he was unharmed."

"However, if a dealer solicits a member to deliver products to him or takes any steps for the purpose of inducing a member to sell or deliver to him his products knowing that the member is under contract to the association, then the dealer can be sued and heavy damages recovered. He also can be prosecuted in the criminal courts.

"It is our opinion that the decision will not harm the organizations. No attempt has ever been made to prosecute a dealer for merely purchasing from a member. Every farmer should be honestly told of just what the decision means and members should understand that the court's opinion is neither a body or death blow to co-operatives."

OUR PEACEFUL UNITED STATES

AT the naval academy at Annapolis, President Coolidge delivered an address emphasizing the peaceful intents of the United States and our traditional stand in international matters.

The naval academy can only fulfill its highest functions if it exists as an "instrument of righteousness, protecting the proper security of this country, while serving to maintain world peace," President Coolidge declared in delivering the address to the graduating class of the academy.

"I do not believe the naval academy can exist if it represents mere naked force," the president said. "I want to see it represent much more than that. We must make it an instrument of righteousness. If we are to promote peace on earth, we must have a good deal more than the power of the sword. We must call into action the spiritual and moral forces of mandkind."

In the following words, the President emphasized the usual peacefulness of the United States.

"It is known of all the world that we have no present or traditional enemies, that we covet no territory, harbor no imperialistic designs and are not arming ourselves with the expectation of attacking or being attacked," he said. "So far as we can look into the future, so far as we can gauge the power and temper of other peoples, there never was a time when it was less likely that any other nation or combination of nations would or could make any attack on us."

The President vigorously denounced persons both in and out of the military or naval services, who seek to advance the cause of preparedness by predicting the immediate danger of war or predicting the hostile intentions of other countries.

"The suggestion that any other people are harboring a hostile intent toward us is a very serious charge to make," he said. "We would not relish having our honorable motives and peaceful intentions questioned, others cannot relish having any of us question theirs. It seems to me perfectly proper for anyone upon any suitable occasion to advocate the maintenance of a navy in keeping with the greatness and dignity of our country."

Though stressing the peaceful aims of his administration and of this country, the President firmly declared for adequate national defense. The peaceful conduct of every day affairs, the preservation of freedom and all material and spiritual progress can only be attained by sufficient military and naval defense.

Starboard and Larboard

Starboard is probably derived from steer board and became identified with the side of the ship to the right of a person at the steer board and facing the bow. The word larboard was used to designate the side to the left. This term has been superseded by the word port in order to avoid the confusion caused by the similarity of names.

Her Answer to His Letter

By CLIFFORD HOWARD

(Copyright.)

HAD the postman been a more observant person he would have seen that the letter he handed to the young woman at the door was both unexpected and disturbing. As it was, however, he passed on without noticing the sudden pallor that overspread her face nor the haste with which she stepped back into the house and closed the door.

Alone, and safe from observation, she stood for a moment in the narrow entry and gazed fixedly at the letter in her trembling hands. "I knew it; it is from Allen!" she whispered.

It was written in pale ink and the chirography was cramped and uneven, making it difficult to decipher. Her hands shook as she smoothed out the folds in the paper and held it up so that the light from the window might fall upon it. Then, in half murmur, half whisper, she read the letter aloud to herself, slowly and haltingly:

HOTEL GRAFTON
Portland, Ore., Sept. 11, 1904.

My Dear Mary:

You will be surprised to hear from me after all this time. I have not written to you since I left Buffalo. That was two years ago last March. I suppose you thought you would never hear from me again, and I thought so, too. I was desperate and hopeless and I thought it was all up with me. I drifted about out here until the spring of 1903, and then I made a strike for gold in Alaska. It was a last chance and a hard one, but I struck it and luck came my way and I cleared up more than a hundred thousand, and all I want now to complete my fortune and make life worth living is for you to forgive me, Mary, and take me back. I know I did wrong not to write to you or send you any word; but I was desperate and I wanted you to forget there was such a man as me. I thought my life was a failure and I did not dare to ask you to marry me and share my bad luck with me. But it is all over now and I love you the same as I always did, and I want you to say it is all right and you will come out to me here and make a home for me. You need never think about work any more. I will build you a house fit for a queen and you can have your horses and servants and all the money you want to buy books and fine dresses. Don't say "no." I have made a man of myself for your sake, Mary, and I love you and I want you. Answer at once and tell me it is all right and say you will come.

It is going on three years since I have heard anything of you. Are you well and are you still hard at work with your typewriting? And how is the twin—Susan? Does she look as much like you as ever? I will never forget how you let me take her to the entertainment that night thinking all the time it was yourself. That was a great joke on me.

I wish I could come myself to fetch you, but I am in a business deal out here that won't let me get away for several weeks, and I can't wait that long for you. Don't think about the expense of the trip. I will look after that. Only say you will come and be my wife. I love you. I love you.

ALLEN.

She laid the letter down, and, turning toward the window, gazed out vacantly into space. A mist had begun to fall in the shadowing twilight, giving to the world without an aspect of utter dreariness. For several minutes the ticking of the clock on the corner shelf was the only sound that broke upon the somber stillness. The woman at the window sat motionless, save for the troubled heaving of her bosom. Her thin, worn hands lay on her lap, tightly clasped, while her upraised face, pale and tense, gave sign in mute distress of the torturing conflict that was burning within her heart.

A tear trickling down her cheek aroused her from her reverie. Mechanically she dried her eyes and then, turning slowly from the window, allowed her gaze to wander about the room in deliberate contemplation of its tokens of poverty and hardship. Everything about her, from her faded dress to the few, cheap pictures on the wall, spoke of toil and struggle and want. It was nothing new. She had been accustomed to it for years; but there was that in her expression now that revealed a sudden aroused and bitter realization of her cheerless surroundings; a passionate revulsion of feeling; a revolt against the conditions that so long had bound her to a life of drudgery and care.

"But, no, no— it is not alone because of this! It is not because of this!" she cried in sudden outburst of self-confession. "It is because I love him, and always have loved him!"

There was a note of defiance in her voice, as of one who has reached a determination in the face of some opposing will, a victory of the heart over the forces of mind and of judgment.

Opening a drawer in the table she took from it a small bottle of ink and a sheet of note paper, and with the eagerness born of impellent resolution she made answer to the letter. She wrote rapidly and without hesitation, speaking aloud each word as she wrote it:

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 18, 1904.

Dear Allen:

Yes, I will come. All is forgiven. I am alone now. Sister is no longer with me. I have suffered much since I saw you last. You must expect to find me altered in many ways. Answer soon and tell me how and when to come. I send you my heart's best love. It has been yours during all these dreary months of silence, and shall be yours till I die.

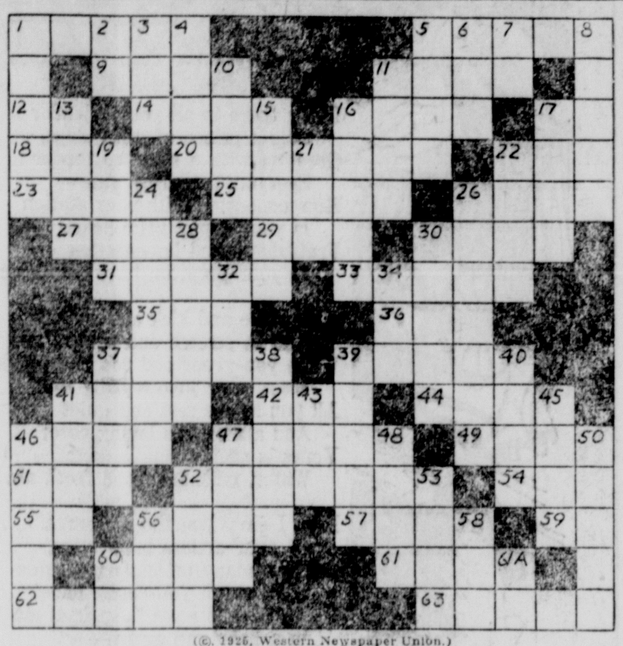

Always your loving
MARY.

She had scarcely signed it, when, with a little cry of fright, she hastily drew her pen through the signature; and snatching up the letter, tore it to bits. With the same impulsive haste she picked up the letter from Allen, put it back into its envelope and deftly resealed it. Then, across the face of it, in an unsteady hand, she wrote: "Return to writer. Mary Sedgwick died April 25, 1903."

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Kilt Not National Dress of Scotland

By many people, the kilt is regarded as the national dress of Scotland, but this is not correct, for it is worn only in the Highlands and has never been popular in the Lowlands. The kilt was suppressed by act of parliament in 1745, after the Jacobite rebellion, and though it was tolerated at a later date, it never became popular again.

The earliest mention of the kilt is to be found in an obscure passage of the Norwegian history of Magnus Barefoot, a king of that country who came to the Hebrides in the Eleventh century. It appears that the dress of those days consisted of a sort of skirt, dyed or painted, and a mantle, the former being the original of the kilt and the latter of the plaid.

In "Letters from the North of Scotland," published in 1725, the author describes the Highlanders as wearing "a bonnet made of thrum, without a brim; a short coat, a waistcoat longer by five or six inches; short stockings, and brogues without heels. Over this habit they wear a plaid, which is usually three yards long and two breadths wide, and the whole garb is made of chequered tartan."

Old Sea Superstition

The Flying Dutchman was a phantom ship seen by sailors in tempestuous weather off the Cape of Good Hope, and considered the forerunner of ill luck. The generally accepted tradition, as stated by Sir Walter Scott, is "that she was originally a vessel loaded with great wealth, on board of which some horrid act of murder and piracy had been committed; that the plague broke out among the wicked crew, who had perpetrated the crime, and that they sailed in vain from port to port, offering, as the price of shelter, the whole of their ill-gotten wealth; that they were excluded from every harbor for fear of the contagion which was devouring them; and that, as a punishment of their crimes, the apparition of the ship still continues to haunt those seas in which the catastrophe took place."—Kansas City Times.

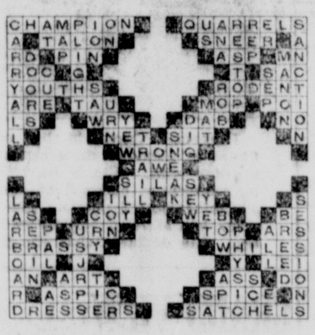

Times Have Changed

In the good old days, when a wagon broke down in the road we used to gather around it and put in several hours apiece inquiring how the contretemps occurred, sympathizing with the owner of the vehicle, and recalling and describing in the most minute detail sundry incidents of similar character which had transpired in the past. But nowadays when a motorcar blows out a tire we go right on.—Eh-yah!—Kansas City Star.

Turkeys Perform Wild Dance Around Snake

I know not if the wild turkey suffers from snake bite; but at sight of a large snake the bird will show extreme excitement. If a flock be present a slow dance will be begun about the reptile, the birds lowering their wings, raising and spreading their tails and making a continuous querulous calling. Single birds will detach themselves from the revolving circle to make frantic dashes at the snake, says a story in "Days Off in Dixie."

"This dervishlike performance will continue for an hour or more. If the snake is not too formidable he will likely be killed; but a serpent of the proportions of a great diamond-back rattler will be left unmolested.

"I once witnessed this strange snake dance in the mountains of southern Pennsylvania. From the top of a hanging ravine I looked down through the mist of dawn and counted the turkeys. There were 26 in number. They continued their antics about the snake for a full half hour, when they broke up the dance and began foraging. The snake was a king snake and a large one. The turkeys probably left him dazed and deafened, but otherwise he was unharmed."

A special musical program will precede the Colonel's address tonight. The various churches of the city have been given a special invitation to attend this service. FARMS WITH GAS OR ELECTRIC SERVICE

Only one farm in thirteen in Minnesota is equipped for electric or gas service, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Figures recently studied show that of the 178,478 farms in the state, only 13,539 farms or 7.6 per cent, make use of electricity and gas, and of this number 3,339 receive central station service.

While the number of Minnesota farms having gas and electricity is on par with the figure for the United States, it is comparatively low when placed alongside the fact that 62 per cent of the farms having telephone service and 64.6 per cent that have automobiles, states the Foundation. This gives rise to speculation as to whether the farmer is content to sacrifice greater comfort and convenience made possible by electricity and gas in favor of rapid communication and transportation that the telephone and auto make possible.

The big drawback to more general use of electricity on farms in the state up to the present has been the high prices made necessary for its delivery into distant sections, and this has served to dicourage many from use of it, states the Foundation. Independent plants for the individual farms have proven popular in some localities, and experiments now being conducted on farms in several states is exected to throw new light on this problem and electrical engineers predict as great a revolution in the use of electricity in the country in the coming decade as was noted in the past decade in the cities.

While electricity on the farm is used mostly for lighting purposes, the farmer with this power at his command has been able to be relieved of many of the tasks around the home place, according to the Foundataion. Electricity does not only pump water for the home, drive the washing machine, heat the electric iron, run the vacuum cleaner, charge the radio and automobile batteries, but it has brought efficiency with it by lighting the yard, stables, and lofts, drive the milking machine, the cream separator, the churn, the grindstone and emery wheel and the general utility motor. Electricity has also ben used to light poultry houses as a stimulant to egg production, to opearte incubator ventilation and controls and occasionally for grinding feed, sawing wood, as well as hoisting hay and grain.

Bad Mowers Make Bad Lawns

Much of the success in establishing a level, velvety stretch of lawn depends upon the mowing. The main need is a good lawn mower. There are scores of lawn mowers on the market, but it will be economy in the long run to get a good mower. The main factor in selecting a mower is the quality of steel in the blades. Will they stand sharpening? Many of the cheap grades of mowers won't. When the first edge is worn off they never perform up to the mark again, despite earnest sharpening.

The result is a ragged looking lawn after the mower goes over it, and the thicker and more luxuriant the growth, the worse the job. A first-class high-grade mower is rather expensive, but it is better to club with a neighbor and get a good mower than to waste money on a bargain counter machine that won't hold up over summer. Find out what sort of steel is in the blades and get the dealer's word for it before taking it away from the store.

Mowers with good steel blades which will take sharpening run twice as easily as the poorer grades and there is great saving in time, labor and nerves. A cheap mower is poor economy.

A last sprinkling of nitrate will be a help to the grass at this stage, to keep up the spring rush. Sprinkle it sparingly, but as evenly as possible, and be sure that all lumps are broken fine. A lump will bring up a heavy growth about it like droppings in a pasture.

The lawn will need no more nitrate until the dry weather hits it and it begins to turn sere. Then give light dressings before wetting it down with the sprinkler.

If there are a few thin spots, scatter white clover seed. It will make a quick cover and give a green surface in a short time. Grass seed may be sown all this month with certainty of a fine stand by fall.

Corinne Griffith Adds Laurels to Her Crown

Admirers of Corinne Griffith's screen charms have a rare opportunity of seeing her in contrast in "Love's Wilderness," her latest First National film, at the New Park last time tonight. Not only does Corinne reveal new splendors in her gowns and riding costumes, but in one sequence she fits herself into the drab, coarse setting of the Canadian woods, to which she has eloped with an adventurer. And at the start of the story she presents a quaint picture as an old-fashioned Southern girl, brought up by two stern maiden aunts.

Beautiful Billie Dove in Great Role

Billie Dove, whose admiring champions say that she is the loveliest girl upon the screen has the most compelling part of her comparatively brief but successful career in "Folly of Vanity," the elaborate production in which Fox Film Corporation again brings Betty Blythe, the glorious "Queen of Sheba" back before her admirers.

Billy Dove and Betty Blythe bring a wealth of drawing power to an attraction in which they are jointly cast and the fact that Jack Mulhall and John Sainpolis are also to be seen in the cast of nearly 1,000 evidences the total disregard for cost manifesed in this very elaborate and very beautiful picture, which comes to the Lyceum on Tuesday for two days.

Joyous Hats Announce the Coming of Spring

In the joyous procession of new hats that announce the coming of spring, there are many types—all the way from audacious and amusing to picturesque and dignified. Two outstanding style features distinguish them—they are colorful and they are trimmed. In the three hats shown above the new modes are reflected with a tall-crowned hat of ombre georgette at the top. Its upturned straw brim is covered with varicolored little blossoms and a pompon of them is perched on the crown. The hat below is a dignified turban with a rich applique trimming on the coronet. FIND BONE OF A 25-TON DINOSAUR

(By United Press)

Chicago, June 8—A bone weighing 930 pounds and belonging to an ancient animal with strength capable of toppling over a modern skyscraper, was recently hoisted into place in the Field Museum here. It is the largst fossil in the institution's collection.

Prof. Elmer S. Riggs, associate curator of the museum, brought the huge bone and others almost as large as the prizes of the "Captain Marshall Field Expedition," which he led into the San Bernardo hills of Chubut, Argentina.

"These old fossils are from animals of such gigantic size that they stagger the human mind," Prof. Riggs said, as he directed a gang of workmen hoisting a thigh-bone of a dinosaur into place by means of steel pulleys and chains.

"The dinosaur that walked with that thigh-bone must have been 90 feet long, weighing probably 25 tons. If it were still alive it might be able to balance itself with difficulty—on the biggest freight car in the world. But it would have to curl its tail carefully."

Fossilized by the passage of many ages, the bones are so hard that a drill hardly dents them.

The big drawback to more general use of electricity on farms in the state up to the present has been the high prices made necessary for its delivery into distant sections, and this has served to dicourage many from use of it, states the Foundation. Independent plants for the individual farms have proven popular in some localities, and experiments now being conducted on farms in several states is exected to throw new light on this problem and electrical engineers predict as great a revolution in the use of electricity in the country in the coming decade as was noted in the past decade in the cities.

While electricity on the farm is used mostly for lighting purposes, the farmer with this power at his command has been able to be relieved of many of the tasks around the home place, according to the Foundataion. Electricity does not only pump water for the home, drive the washing machine, heat the electric iron, run the vacuum cleaner, charge the radio and automobile batteries, but it has brought efficiency with it by lighting the yard, stables, and lofts, drive the milking machine, the cream separator, the churn, the grindstone and emery wheel and the general utility motor. Electricity has also ben used to light poultry houses as a stimulant to egg production, to opearte incubator ventilation and controls and occasionally for grinding feed, sawing wood, as well as hoisting hay and grain.

Unworthy Feelings

Bad Mowers Make Bad Lawns

Much of the success in establishing a level, velvety stretch of lawn depends upon the mowing. The main need is a good lawn mower. There are scores of lawn mowers on the market, but it will be economy in the long run to get a good mower. The main factor in selecting a mower is the quality of steel in the blades. Will they stand sharpening? Many of the cheap grades of mowers won't. When the first edge is worn off they never perform up to the mark again, despite earnest sharpening.

The result is a ragged looking lawn after the mower goes over it, and the thicker and more luxuriant the growth, the worse the job. A first-class high-grade mower is rather expensive, but it is better to club with a neighbor and get a good mower than to waste money on a bargain counter machine that won't hold up over summer. Find out what sort of steel is in the blades and get the dealer's word for it before taking it away from the store.

Mowers with good steel blades which will take sharpening run twice as easily as the poorer grades and there is great saving in time, labor and nerves. A cheap mower is poor economy.

A last sprinkling of nitrate will be a help to the grass at this stage, to keep up the spring rush. Sprinkle it sparingly, but as evenly as possible, and be sure that all lumps are broken fine. A lump will bring up a heavy growth about it like droppings in a pasture.

The lawn will need no more nitrate until the dry weather hits it and it begins to turn sere. Then give light dressings before wetting it down with the sprinkler.

If there are a few thin spots, scatter white clover seed. It will make a quick cover and give a green surface in a short time. Grass seed may be sown all this month with certainty of a fine stand by fall.

Corinne Griffith and Ian Keith in "Love's Wilderness"

Corinne Griffith Adds Laurels to Her Crown

Admirers of Corinne Griffith's screen charms have a rare opportunity of seeing her in contrast in "Love's Wilderness," her latest First National film, at the New Park last time tonight. Not only does Corinne reveal new splendors in her gowns and riding costumes, but in one sequence she fits herself into the drab, coarse setting of the Canadian woods, to which she has eloped with an adventurer. And at the start of the story she presents a quaint picture as an old-fashioned Southern girl, brought up by two stern maiden aunts.

Elinor Glyn's New Picture, "Man and Maid" at Lyceum

If you want to see a picture full of love and intrigue, don't miss Elinor Glyn's "Man and Maid," which has its last showing at the Lyceum Theatre tonight.

Madame Glyn has psychology at the tips of her fingers and knows how to put her theories over on the screen as well as she does in her writing.

Scene from Elinor Glyn's MAN AND MAID

She offers for our approval a new leading woman Harriet Hammond. Miss Hammond is an ethereal blonde, and gave a beautiful performance of the heroine—Alathea.

Lew Cody astounds one as the hero and makes one hope he will never play anything else but parts like that of Sir Nicholas Thormonde from this time on.

Beautiful Billie Dove in Great Role

Billie Dove, whose admiring champions say that she is the loveliest girl upon the screen has the most compelling part of her comparatively brief but successful career in "Folly of Vanity," the elaborate production in which Fox Film Corporation again brings Betty Blythe, the glorious "Queen of Sheba" back before her admirers.

Billy Dove and Betty Blythe bring a wealth of drawing power to an attraction in which they are jointly cast and the fact that Jack Mulhall and John Sainpolis are also to be seen in the cast of nearly 1,000 evidences the total disregard for cost manifesed in this very elaborate and very beautiful picture, which comes to the Lyceum on Tuesday for two days.

Screen Needs New Faces, Says Cruze

New faces!

It's the perpetual cry of motion picture producers and James Cruze, who made "The Coverd Wagon" and many other Paramount successes, is blazing the trail.

Beginning with his latest production, "The Goose Hangs High," showing at the New Park Tuesday and Wednesday, a cinema version of the well known stage play by Lewis Beach, he has actively launched a campaign to fill his forthcoming pictures with faces new to the screen world.

Joyous Hats Announce the Coming of Spring

In the joyous procession of new hats that announce the coming of spring, there are many types—all the way from audacious and amusing to picturesque and dignified. Two outstanding style features distinguish them—they are colorful and they are trimmed. In the three hats shown above the new modes are reflected with a tall-crowned hat of ombre georgette at the top. Its upturned straw brim is covered with varicolored little blossoms and a pompon of them is perched on the crown. The hat below is a dignified turban with a rich applique trimming on the coronet. The group is finished with a lovely picture hat having flowers made of shaded ribbon at the front.

FIND BONE OF A 25-TON DINOSAUR

(By United Press)

Chicago, June 8—A bone weighing 930 pounds and belonging to an ancient animal with strength capable of toppling over a modern skyscraper, was recently hoisted into place in the Field Museum here. It is the largst fossil in the institution's collection.

Prof. Elmer S. Riggs, associate curator of the museum, brought the huge bone and others almost as large as the prizes of the "Captain Marshall Field Expedition," which he led into the San Bernardo hills of Chubut, Argentina.

"These old fossils are from animals of such gigantic size that they stagger the human mind," Prof. Riggs said, as he directed a gang of workmen hoisting a thigh-bone of a dinosaur into place by means of steel pulleys and chains.

"The dinosaur that walked with that thigh-bone must have been 90 feet long, weighing probably 25 tons. If it were still alive it might be able to balance itself with difficulty—on the biggest freight car in the world. But it would have to curl its tail carefully."

Fossilized by the passage of many ages, the bones are so hard that a drill hardly dents them.

St. Paul, June 8—Warning against two new counterfeits of currency has been issued by the United States treasury department.

One is of a crude reproduction of a $20 gold certificate, printed on heavy paper with red and blue ink lines to imitate the fiber of the genuine note. The color work is described as poor.

The other is a $10 federal reserve note on the bank of Boston, printed on single sheets of paper with no attempt at imitation of the silk fiber threads. It is held to be an excellent counterfeit.

compared to the heat he left behind him at the capitol.

President Receives Ovation

A flurry of rain and a blustery wind an hour before the president was to speak at the fair grounds sent crowds scurrying to cover. The rain was not unexpected, however, and throngs in the open seats of the amphitheater put up umbrellas.

The presidential party arrived at the New Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, at 12:25 p. m. after a ride of one hour and 10 minutes through a living lane of cheering people.

The ten-mile drive between the two cities was solidly banked with humanity, including thousands of children waving flags. Schools were dismissed to permit them to see the chief executive.

Mr. Coolidge received a notable ovation from the crowds in Minneapolis. The streets around the hotel particularly were banked solidly.

The ride was somewhat disagreeable, owing to a cool north wind, but the president did not seem to mind it. He acknowledged applause with a wave of his hand as did Mrs. Coolidge, but he did not remove his hat because of the cold. The president rode over in an open car with Mrs. Coolidge and Dr. G. Bothne, President of the Centennial.

The presidential party was met at the hotel by the committee in charge of the Centennial. Senator Shipstead of Minnesota, Norbeck of South Dakota and former Representative Volstead were in the party.

PRESIDENT HAS A LUNCHEON ENGAGEMENT

St. Paul, June 8.—President Coolidge and party left the home of Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg shortly after 11 o'clock for a luncheon engagement in Minneapolis.

There was a threat of rain in the overcast sky and strong, shifting winds chased the mercury up and down around 60 degrees in the thermometer.

The president wore a light top coat and the windows of the car were mostly closed. The president planned to go direct from the luncheon with the Norse-American officials to the fair grounds for his speech.

HARDY NORWEGIANS BRAVE THE ATLANTIC

Treasures in Ocean

The ocean appears to the traveler to be a vast expanse of salty water valued chiefly for transportation and source of rainfall. Yet it is veritably teaming with plant and animal life, and its depths hold untold treasures. Its saltiness has caused much inconvenience, for many, as Coleridge's Ancient Mariner, have had parched throats with "Water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink." Although apparently a nuisance and worthless, sea salt is Nature's storehouse of treasures to the chemist, for it contains all the valuable constituents of the earth's crust that have been leached out by the countless rains of former years.

Keep on Keeping On

When last I went West by way of the Broadway Limited, I was sitting on the observation platform, watching the scenery dash by, when the porter came out to straighten the chairs which had been left in some disorder by a group of young folks.

"We don't seem to be going so much faster than an ordinary local train, George," I commented. "How, then, can this be the fastest train on earth?"

"Wall, suh," replied the African, with a grin, "de fac' is we alls doan go no faster'n lots of them pesky locals, but we gits dar in quick time because we jist keeps on keeping on."—W. L. Barnhart in Forbes Magazine.

1. A has the right of way over B.
2. A has the right of way over B, and C must wait for B to pass before proceeding over the intersection.
3. A passes B, as the latter wishes to turn corner to the left.
4. At diagonal intersections of five corners, A has the right of way over B.
5. A has the right of way over B in passing side entrance on right to enter side road.
6. A has first turn to right hand road, followed by B, who makes the left turn.
7. A has the right of way over B in turning to the left while B turns to the right.
8. Four cars approach an intersecting way, each intending to turn to the right.
9. Showing the turns made without confusion or delay.

Passage of a uniform national traffic law which will make it possible for motorists to drive through any state in the Union without endangering the lives of others through a lack of knowledge of local highway regulations, is the object sought in a movement of insurance executives, headed by J. C. Adderly, president of the Integrity Mutual Casualty Company of Chicago.

In a letter addressed to the governors of all states, Mr. Adderly, after recounting the number and severity of automobile accidents that were a direct result of ignorance regarding rules of the road, urged the various executives to draft a set of regulations that would meet local conditions.

"After such a survey is made, it is suggested to draw up a uniform set of rules which will be submitted to each state legislature for its decision.

"Already there is one rule," said Mr. Adderly, "which is in effect in a number of states. That is the law governing the passage of cars at intersecting ways. A knowledge of this rule will go far towards reducing the number of accidents at street corners and highway intersections.

"If the motorist will always remember that all vehicles traveling upon public highways shall give the right of way to other vehicles approaching along intersecting highways from the right, and shall have the right of way over those approaching from the left, he will be safe in driving about the country.

"This law is on the Illinois statute books and similar laws are in effect in other states. The rule is in general use throughout the country.

"Uniformity of motor vehicle laws will reduce the terrible toll of accidents that is recorded each year. We have now reached a point where some action must be taken, not from the standpoint of dollars and cents alone, which of itself is alarming, but from the standpoint of life and limb.

"We can always replace the dollars and cents but we cannot call back into being or make whole the little tots that are daily being killed and mangled. That is the real tragedy in automobile accidents and anything that will reduce this toll deserves the sober consideration of all thinking men."

AIRY MIDSUMMER MILLINERY DRIFTS OVER FASHION'S HORIZON

MANY of those who foretell coming events in the world of millinery, are assuring the inquisitive that this is to be a summer of airy headwear. Everywhere the tendency is toward sheer and delicate materials. Some of these prophets maintain that we are to have "a white summer"—that there will be a greater proportion of white hats worn than for many past summers. Looking back to recent important Easter weddings, which brought out advance summer millinery, makes one have faith in diaphanous hats—in headwear of hair braid, lace, malines and combinations of sheer fabrics with straw. All these, in light tones and in stronger shades of fashionable colors, crowned the heads of maids and matrons who conducted the brides altarwards.

Here are four late arrivals in the ranks of midsummer's dressy hats that appear to have reached the limit of sheer and delicate materials—they are as light as thistledown, mere shreds of thin clouds, drifting in over the horizon of fashion. First, at the top of the group pictured, there is a hat of white hair braid having frills of lingerie lace set in rows on the underbrim and a big rosette of it posed against the crown. It is an exquisite thing. At the left a hat of georgette crepe and hair braid has a wide, droopy brim, and round crown encircled with a full wreath of little garden roses and foliage. They might be of any light color on a white hat, and a wreath of organdie roses, in varied colors, would find itself against a perfect background on this shape. Organdie, in white and light colors, is an ideal millinery fabric.

The poke bonnet at the right might be made of it, or of chiffon. It is finished with a soft frill about the brim edge and a sash of ribbon with ends falling from the left side where a cluster of roses is posed. The wide-brimmed hair braid that finishes the group varies the brim-line by a lift at the front where two transparent flowers are posed against the crown.

Dickens Great Artist, Not Mental Specialist

Mr. Micawber, Miss Flite and the numerous other queer characters who populate the pages of Charles Dickens books are correctly depicted from the viewpoint of the layman who sees what he thinks he ought to see, but not when viewed by a specialist in mental diseases.

This is the opinion of Dr. Charles W. Burr, professor of psychiatry in the University of Pennsylvania medical school, who has applied to these fiction characters the methods which he uses in diagnosing mental disorders when called into a criminal court as an alienist.

"Dickens was an artist," says Doctor Burr, "and not a specialist in mental medicine. Just as the dying of a great actor on the stage is altogether unlike death as the physician sees it, so life seen with an artist's eyes is unlike life seen by the professor trained in the learning of the schools. Death as it really happens, acted on the stage, would be flat, stale and uninteresting. Dickens describes a fairyland, not seldom a fairyland into which devils have intruded. This is the secret of his wide appeal spreading through space and lasting through time."—Science Service.

Had to Time Their Walks by Almanac

Ouvrard, the great French army contractor, was at one time "wanted" by the officers of the tribunal of commerce for some offense. According to the law he could not be arrested as long as the sun was not up. As a result he was in the habit of taking his constitutional for an hour before sunrise every morning, judging the time by the almanac, H. C. Kitchen contributes to the Kansas City Star.

In spite of his care, however, he was arrested one morning on his saunter, and the authorities proved that the almanac was wrong, and that as a matter of fact the sun rose ten minutes earlier than the book stated.

Consequently, Ouvrard brought legal actions against both the compiler and publisher of the book. The courts upheld him and the latter were forced to pay damages.

This "walking by the almanac" was no unusual thing in France. Balzac was at one time under the necessity of timing his public appearances in this way.

Because it is richer in vitamines than any other food in the world.

Doctors prescribe it for rickets and anaemia in children and for tuberculosis, malnutrition and convalescence in grown up people.

As a producer of weight — good healthy flesh—there is nothing in the world so good.

But it's nasty tasting, horrible smelling stuff that often upsets the stomach so doctors now are ordering cod liver oil in tablet form.

It's so good that if it doesn't put on five pounds of good healthy flesh on any skinny man or woman in thirty days the McCoy Laboratories of New York authorize H. P. Dunn, Johnson's Pharmacy, Economy Drug Co. and all druggists to return the price you paid for it.

Be sure to ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—sixty tablets—60 cents. One woman put on fifteen pounds in five weeks, and they are especially valuable to weak, thin children.

Simply by glancing over the advertisements in your paper, you can see where to go for the best buys. You can compare values and check up prices without even stirring from your easy chair. You know in advance just what you are going to get and how much it will cost. And you can have the satisfaction that comes from knowing your money is wisely and safely spent.

AIRY MIDSUMMER MILLINERY DRIFTS OVER FASHION'S HORIZON

MANY of those who foretell coming events in the world of millinery, are assuring the inquisitive that this is to be a summer of airy headwear. Everywhere the tendency is toward sheer and delicate materials. Some of these prophets maintain that we are to have "a white summer"—that there will be a greater proportion of white hats worn than for many past summers. Looking back to recent important Easter weddings, which brought out advance summer millinery, makes one have faith in diaphanous hats—in headwear of hair braid, lace, malines and combinations of sheer fabrics with straw. All these, in light tones and in stronger shades of fashionable colors, crowned the heads of maids and matrons who conducted the brides altarwards.

Here are four late arrivals in the ranks of midsummer's dressy hats that appear to have reached the limit of sheer and delicate materials—they are as light as thistledown, mere shreds of thin clouds, drifting in over the horizon of fashion. First, at the top of the group pictured, there is a hat of white hair braid having frills of lingerie lace set in rows on the underbrim and a big rosette of it posed against the crown. It is an exquisite thing. At the left a hat of georgette crepe and hair braid has a wide, droopy brim, and round crown encircled with a full wreath of little garden roses and foliage. They might be of any light color on a white hat, and a wreath of organdie roses, in varied colors, would find itself against a perfect background on this shape. Organdie, in white and light colors, is an ideal millinery fabric.

The poke bonnet at the right might be made of it, or of chiffon. It is finished with a soft frill about the brim edge and a sash of ribbon with ends falling from the left side where a cluster of roses is posed. The wide-brimmed hair braid that finishes the group varies the brim-line by a lift at the front where two transparent flowers are posed against the crown.

Support for Plant Stalk

A charming support to hold steady the stalk of a plant in a pot consists of a slender stick with a painted wooden bird nailed or glued at its top. Such a bird may be cut, in silhouette, from thin soft wood and painted in bright colors with oil or house paints, and afterward varnished. Even though the work is somewhat roughly done, the effect will still be good.

Dog's Acute Hearing

An anthropologist of note has invented a whistle with an adjustable plug which can be rendered more and more shrill until the vibrations are so rapid that they no longer affect the human ear. But a dog can still hear them, and will respond readily to their call.

WHY SKINNY FOLKS TAKE COD LIVER OIL

Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days or Get Your Money Back

Because it is richer in vitamines than any other food in the world.

Doctors prescribe it for rickets and anaemia in children and for tuberculosis, malnutrition and convalescence in grown up people.

As a producer of weight — good healthy flesh—there is nothing in the world so good.

But it's nasty tasting, horrible smelling stuff that often upsets the stomach so doctors now are ordering cod liver oil in tablet form.

It's so good that if it doesn't put on five pounds of good healthy flesh on any skinny man or woman in thirty days the McCoy Laboratories of New York authorize H. P. Dunn, Johnson's Pharmacy, Economy Drug Co. and all druggists to return the price you paid for it.

Be sure to ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—sixty tablets—60 cents. One woman put on fifteen pounds in five weeks, and they are especially valuable to weak, thin children.

DR. HUMPHREYS' "24" TONIC TABLETS BUILD YOU UP

"The slick guy"

Nearly every one of us has seen the checkerd-suit person with the velvet tongue. How smoothly he once told of the merits of this product or that—and raked in perfectly good coin for purchases that were often worthless.

The "slick guy" is seldom seen today. When the wise person goes to buy, he knows what is good in value and fair in price.

Simply by glancing over the advertisements in your paper, you can see where to go for the best buys. You can compare values and check up prices without even stirring from your easy chair. You know in advance just what you are going to get and how much it will cost. And you can have the satisfaction that comes from knowing your money is wisely and safely spent.

Nowadays, no one need be at the mercy of the "slick guy." There are still a few people who fail to read the advertisements—and "take a chance." Don't be one of them.

Advertised products are safe buys. They have made good before they are announced

AUTO ACCIDENT INJURES TWO

Miss Lina M. Fenske is Very Seriously Hurt And Now at Hospital

CAR CRASHED THROUGH RAIL

Her Escort P. A. McGarry Received What is Thought Minor Injuries

Miss Lina M. Fenske, 515 Forsythe street, Northeast, was very seriously injured, and P. A. McGarry, 911 Maple street, received what is thought to be only minor injuries, when the Essex coach in which they were riding went over a 25-foot embankment on the north side of Ahrens hil late Sunday afternoon.

The car is said to have ben traveling north on the Merrifield road, and had just negotiated the long curve around the hill when the accident occurred. The cause could not be learned, but it is thought that McGarry lost control of the car, or that he allowed it to get too near the edge of the road, and in attempting to swing back skidded over the side and down the embankment. The shoulder of the highway is well packed and hard, so that the machine could not have settled in any loose gravel, according to Walter M. Murphy, county highway engineer.

Although no one saw the accident it is evident from marks down the embankment that the Essex turned over twice in rolling down, and finally landed at the bottom upside down, with all four wheels in the air. In going over it broke through the guard rail at the side of the road and two sections of this rail were forced through the cowl of the car, one striking Miss Fenske in the limb the other just passing her body and piercing the back of the seat in which she was sitting. She is said to have been thrown partially out of the car in such a manner that the top rested on her head pinning her beneath.

McGarry was able to free himself from the wreck and made his way back to the road where he hailed a passing automobile, said to be carrying delegates from Porter, Minnesota to the firemen's state convention at Crosby, and with this assistance the Essex was turned over on its side and Miss Fenske liberated.

Both were rushed to local hositals Miss Fenske was taken to St. Joseph's and was unconscious for some time. McGarry was taken to Northwestern hospital, where his injuries were given attention.

Physicians are not prepared to say just what the extent of Miss Fenske's injurise are. She received several deep gashes on her limbs from the sections of the guard rail, and was severely bruised about the head and body. Just what the extent of any internal injuries may be is problematical, and cannot be learned until further developments take place. She is reported as resting a little easier today, but is still in a very serious condition.

McGarry is said to have received only minor injuries, and will be able to leave the hospital in a day or two. It was first thought that he had suffered a fractured arm, but this is reported as being untrue.

The Essex car is badly wrecked. The top is broken, the fenders, running boards and body twisted and dented, one wheel is crushed, the frame bent, and windshield and other glass broken.

This is the second accident that has occurred at practically the same place on the Merrifield road within the past year, a car going over the embankment late last summer, without serious injury to the occupants. It is planned to place meshed wire guards along the road at this point, which will eliminate much of the danger of these accidents.

COUNTY NURSE IS RE-ELECTED

Board of County Commissioners Highly Pleased With Work of Miss Thora Ingebritson

COMMITTEE TO DIRECT HER

8 Road Improvements Let by Board, One Having Graveling Section of State Road No. 4

Miss Thora Ingebritson, was re-elected county nurse at the regular meeting of the board of county commissioners held on Saturday.

Under the provisions of section 196, of the session laws of 1925, state of Minnesota, it is provided that a public health nurse may be employed, who will work under the direction of a committee composed of the county superintendent of schools, the public health office or some other physician, a member of the board of commissioners, and two residents of the county at large.

In accordance with this law, the committee in Crow Wing county, under which Miss Ingebritson will work as public health nurse, will be composed of County Superintendent Irma C. Hartley, Dr. B. Smith, of Crosby, John Dewing, as a member from the board of commissioners, and as members at large, Mrs. W. H. Cleary of Brainerd, and Mrs. J. J. Thurlow, of Pequot.

Miss Ingebritson came to Brainerd several years ago as county nurse, but for the past winter has been acting as county Red Cross nurse. By the action of the county commissioners on Saturday, she will be returned to her original position.

One of the principal items of business before the commissioners at Saturday's meeting was the letting of contracts for three road improvements in the county.

The first was for the graveling of one and one-half miles of new highway just south of the Mississippi river bridge north of Crosby on State Road No. 4, running from Crosby to Emily. The estimated cost of this work was $2,171.72. Following are the bidders with their prices: Earl Welton, Crosby, $2,288.20; R. L. Speakes, Crosby, $1,694.06; Hans Hanson, Crosby, $1,563.73; John Humphrey, Deerwood, $2,115.75; J. B. Schmit, Mission, $1,739.80; Ramson and O'Neil, Bennetville, $1,909.16.

The contract was awarded to Hans Hanson, he being the lowest bidder. Work will start June 9th, and be completed by June 30th.

The second job let was for the clearing and grubbing of a new section of State Road No. 3, which runs from Brainerd north through Merrifield, Cross Lake and Emily. The new portion is between Cross Lake and Emily, and the bid called for the clearing of 12 acres and the grubbing of 10 acres. The bids received were as follows:

Estimated cost, $870. J. B. Schmit, $870; Ramson and O'Neil, $810; R. M. Haff and Sons, Merrifield, $710; Flanders and Buchite, Emily, $1,100. H. M. Haff and Sons, offering the lowest bid, were awarded the contract. Work is to start on June 15th, and is to be completed by July 15th.

The third job is that of grading and surfacing the new road around the addition to Lum park. This road is to be one-half mile in length, and the estimated cost was $1,513.75. Following are the bids received

John Humphrey, $1,469; J. B. Schmidt, $1,880.25; Ramson and O'Neil, $1,297. The last named received the contract, being the lowest bidder. Work is to be started at once, and to be completed by July 1st.

A petition was received from school district No. 105, asking that portions of districts No. 11 and No. 27 be added to it. This matter was referred to the several districts concerned to effect a compromise, if possible, before any action is taken by the board.

The matter of a defective sidewalk on the Laurel street bridge across the Mississippi river was referred to the county highway engineer as to its condition, so that definite plans may be made for repairs. The roadway on the bridge has been taken over by the state highway department, but the sidewalk is still under county supervision, it is said.

A committee from the city council, composed of Aldermen Martin Anderson and Christ Elvig appeared before the commissioners, urging the co-operation of the board in re-routing Trunk Highway No. 2, through Northeast Brainerd, in going from this city to Crosby and east to Duluth. The matter was discussed, but it was decided to take no action thereon at this time.

Executive Committee of Corporation Laboring Faithfully in Its Behalf

A meeting is called for Tuesday evening of this week, June 9, at the Northwestern hospital of all persons who are interested in the success of that institution. A corporation has been formed, known as the Protestant Churches Hospital Association, with the view of purhcasing and carrying forward the work of this hospital and so preserving it as an institution for the service of the community.

An executive committee of this corporation has been working during the past year to bring about a condition that would make possible the purchase of this hospital and make it a going concern. This committee has been very successful in this work though the work has been slow and very difficult. The meeting on Tuesday night is for the committee to present to the people of the community the result of their work and show that the hospital may now be purchased at a safe figure and be put on a sound financial basis.

It needs however, the backing of the community and every person who can do so should plan to be present at this meeting. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the dining room of the hospital.

"UNCLE ROBBIE" AS MANAGING PRESIDENT

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, June 8.—Playing managers in the major leagues came back in style several years ago when it was shown in the case of Tris Speaker that the burden of management was not too much of a load for a good player. Since then bench managers have found a poor market because it is better business for a club owner to have a manager who can do the work of a manager and a player and thereby reduce the payroll.

As the custom of getting a playing manager is a practical idea from the business point of view, so is it practical to have a thorough baseball man at the head of a club and former managers in the future may be as much in demand as smart players are now sought for places as managers.

Three of the best business investments in the National League are now practically in the hands of experienced former players and managers and a fourth club is being rebuilt under the direction of a former player.

John McGraw, when the New York Giants were sold several years ago, was permitted to buy a large block of stock and he was elected to the position of vice president. While Charles A. Stoneham is nominally the president of the club, McGraw is virtually the head of the club, as Stoneham's time is well occupied with other business enterprises.

Clarke Griffith rose from the ranks of the players to a manager's job and then ascended to the presidency of the Washington Senators, a club that is now one of the best paying clubs in the game.

When the Boston Braves were purchased several years ago by a syndicate including several bankers, Christy Mathewson, the hero of the Giants years ago, was placed in the presidency. Mathewson had some experience as a manager when his playing days were over and if it had not been for the war he might have been more of a success than he was with the Cincinnati Reds. He most certainly could have landed with some other club if his service in France had not broken his health.

Recently Wilbert Robinson was elevated from the management to the presidency of the Brooklyn Robins, one of the best paying investments in baseball. Like McGraw, Griffith and Mathewson, Robby was a great player and a successful manager and it is quite certain that the business of the club will not suffer under his administration.

ANTELOPE REFUGE ON T. R.'S OLD RANCH

(By United Press)

Williston, N. D., June 8.—Four sections of the Trail ranch along the Little Missouri, comprising much of Theodore Roosevelt's ranch when he "roughed it" as a young man in the Dakota Bad lands, have been offered to the state by "Badlands Bill" McCarthy, owner. McCarthy further offers to fence the gift from his nine-section ranch if the state game and fish commission will set it aside as a game preserve, primarily for the protection of a herd of 75 antelopes. Bill thinks that it is fitting that "Teddy's" old ranch should be a refuge for game.

BUSH PITCHES BROWNS TO WIN OVER YANKEES

New York, June 8.—St. Louis won from the Yankees yesterday, 5 to 2, three hits and three bases on balls off Beall in the opening inning netting four runs. Ken Williams of the Browns, hit his fourteenth home run of the season off Shocker in the eighth.

Jimmy Williams, star Macalester second baseman and shortstop for the last two years, was yesterday selected to captain the 1926 Mac ball team.

Resourceful Man

One "victim" saw him coming, locked himself in the house and snatched up a pair of bellows.

The officer knocked several times without response, and then proceeded to put the summons under the door, but it promptly blew out again.

This was repeated many times and finally the policeman, getting tired, picked up the summons with the remark:

"Well, I don't blame him for not paying rent for a drafty hole like that!"

Brave Woman Rewarded

"Molly Pitcher" is the name by which Mary Ludwig Hays is popularly known. "Moll o' the Pitcher" is the original form of the nickname. When her husband was wounded at the battle of Monmouth, Molly ran to his assistance, helped him to a sheltered place and returned to "man" his gun. All day long she served it, loading and firing. For her gallantry, General Washington commended her; the Continental congress voted her a sergeant's commission and half pay through life, and Pennsylvania granted her an annuity.

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Christopher Greene Here Won Fame

"The post with which you are entrusted is of utmost importance to America. The whole defense of the Delaware depends upon it; and consequently all the enemy's hopes of keeping Philadelphia and finally succeeding in the present campaign." So wrote George Washington to Col. Christopher Greene, a brave officer who had fought under Arnold and Montgomery at Quebec and who was now in this critical year of 1777 given command of Fort Mercer at Red Bank on the New Jersey shore of the Delaware river. Fort Mifflin and Fort Mercer, named for Gen. Hugh Mercer, were two threats against Philadelphia. Lord Howe had occupied that city and Greene was given 400 Rhode Island Continentals to hold the post.

Greene immediately began putting the fort into condition, a work in which he was greatly aided by Capt. Mauduit Duplessis, a young French engineer who had enlisted in the patriot cause. Before the repairs were completed, however, a force of 1,200 Hessian grenadiers, led by the famous Count Donop, appeared and demanded its surrender. Greene scornfully replied that he would defend his post to the last and refused to be frightened when Donop declared that no quarter would be given if he was forced to take Fort Mercer by storm.

So the Hessians, covered by a heavy artillery fire, advanced in two columns to attack the outworks of the fort. After pouring in a galling fire, Greene's Rhode Islanders retired to the main works where they concealed themselves to give the attackers the idea that the post was poorly garrisoned. When the enemy poured through a breach which they had made in the north redoubt, they gave a great cheer as though the victory was already won.

Just at that moment a concealed battery was unmasked and accompanied by a heavy musketry fire it poured out a blast of death upon the Teutons. The attackers reeled back. On the south side of the fort Count Donop, leading his men in person, went down mortally wounded. His second in command was also stricken, and although the next in command tried hard to lead his men on, the stubborn resistance of the Rhode Islanders and their destructive fire had broken the spirit of the Hessians who retreated precipitately.

In this brief battle the enemy lost more than 400 men. The American loss was only eight killed and twenty-nine wounded! This brilliant defense brought a thrill of hope to the country in one of the darkest days of the Revolution and congress recognized the achievement of Colonel Greene by passing him a vote of thanks and presenting him a sword as a testimonial of distinguished merit.

ANTELOPE REFUGE ON T. R.'S OLD RANCH

(By United Press)

Williston, N. D., June 8.—Four sections of the Trail ranch along the Little Missouri, comprising much of Theodore Roosevelt's ranch when he "roughed it" as a young man in the Dakota Bad lands, have been offered to the state by "Badlands Bill" McCarthy, owner. McCarthy further offers to fence the gift from his nine-section ranch if the state game and fish commission will set it aside as a game preserve, primarily for the protection of a herd of 75 antelopes. Bill thinks that it is fitting that "Teddy's" old ranch should be a refuge for game.

Walker, king of the welterweights, believes in varying his training work so that it does not become monotonous. He supplements his road work, bag punching, shadow-boxing and bouts with sparring partners with tree-climbing, pole-vaulting, gymnastics, court-rolling, etc. Included in the etcetera is the hand-stand, as demonstrated above. This photograph was taken while Mickey was preparing at Summit, N. J. for his battle this month in New York with Harry Greb, champion of the world's middleweights.

Jimmy Williams Elected Captain of Mac Nine

Jimmy Williams, star Macalester second baseman and shortstop for the last two years, was yesterday selected to captain the 1926 Mac ball team.

Before entering Macalester, Williams starred on the Minneapolis Central nine. At Macalester he has been one of the best ball players that Coach Thacker has ever had, and has starred on the baseball team both years.

Resourceful Man

One "victim" saw him coming, locked himself in the house and snatched up a pair of bellows.

The officer knocked several times without response, and then proceeded to put the summons under the door, but it promptly blew out again.

This was repeated many times and finally the policeman, getting tired, picked up the summons with the remark:

"Well, I don't blame him for not paying rent for a drafty hole like that!"

Brave Woman Rewarded

"Molly Pitcher" is the name by which Mary Ludwig Hays is popularly known. "Moll o' the Pitcher" is the original form of the nickname. When her husband was wounded at the battle of Monmouth, Molly ran to his assistance, helped him to a sheltered place and returned to "man" his gun. All day long she served it, loading and firing. For her gallantry, General Washington commended her; the Continental congress voted her a sergeant's commission and half pay through life, and Pennsylvania granted her an annuity.

World's Continents

According to modern geographers there are six continents—Europe, Asia, Africa, North America, South America and Australia. Some authorities add the Antarctic continent, although this territory has not been sufficiently explored to determine its exact extent.

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Christopher Greene Here Won Fame

"The post with which you are entrusted is of utmost importance to America. The whole defense of the Delaware depends upon it; and consequently all the enemy's hopes of keeping Philadelphia and finally succeeding in the present campaign." So wrote George Washington to Col. Christopher Greene, a brave officer who had fought under Arnold and Montgomery at Quebec and who was now in this critical year of 1777 given command of Fort Mercer at Red Bank on the New Jersey shore of the Delaware river. Fort Mifflin and Fort Mercer, named for Gen. Hugh Mercer, were two threats against Philadelphia. Lord Howe had occupied that city and Greene was given 400 Rhode Island Continentals to hold the post.

Greene immediately began putting the fort into condition, a work in which he was greatly aided by Capt. Mauduit Duplessis, a young French engineer who had enlisted in the patriot cause. Before the repairs were completed, however, a force of 1,200 Hessian grenadiers, led by the famous Count Donop, appeared and demanded its surrender. Greene scornfully replied that he would defend his post to the last and refused to be frightened when Donop declared that no quarter would be given if he was forced to take Fort Mercer by storm.

So the Hessians, covered by a heavy artillery fire, advanced in two columns to attack the outworks of the fort. After pouring in a galling fire, Greene's Rhode Islanders retired to the main works where they concealed themselves to give the attackers the idea that the post was poorly garrisoned. When the enemy poured through a breach which they had made in the north redoubt, they gave a great cheer as though the victory was already won.

Just at that moment a concealed battery was unmasked and accompanied by a heavy musketry fire it poured out a blast of death upon the Teutons. The attackers reeled back. On the south side of the fort Count Donop, leading his men in person, went down mortally wounded. His second in command was also stricken, and although the next in command tried hard to lead his men on, the stubborn resistance of the Rhode Islanders and their destructive fire had broken the spirit of the Hessians who retreated precipitately.

In this brief battle the enemy lost more than 400 men. The American loss was only eight killed and twenty-nine wounded! This brilliant defense brought a thrill of hope to the country in one of the darkest days of the Revolution and congress recognized the achievement of Colonel Greene by passing him a vote of thanks and presenting him a sword as a testimonial of distinguished merit.
